DAILY READING—Isaiah 54: 9-17

DAILY TEXT—"Behold, I have created the smith that bloweth the coals in the fire" (verse 16).

Some of the most bitter drops in my cup have, at the time in which they were given, seemed entirely uncalled for and not of God, but in bowing and yielding to Him in all, each has proved to be a blessing. The stumbling blocks have been stepping stones in grace, and of all my experiences, these are the brightest on memory's page, because revealing to me more of Him who is my life, and I have thus learned to adore His purposes without knowing them. The Father is behind all; He "created the smith that bloweth the coals in the fire . . . and . . . the waster to destroy." He goeth before us and openeth the way in which we meet the trials that, as one has said, "are as angels to beckon us on to God."
